

NEW DVD Features One Family's Journey toward Braille literacy to Inform and Inspire Families and Educators

Letting Your Child's Literate Side Out: Raising a Child Who Loves to Learn
(ISBN: 9780983476078)

From the parents who created the unique DVD titled Letting Your Child's Wild Side Out: Raising a Confident Blind Baby, Toddler, Preschooler (ISBN: 9780983476085) comes the first family-created DVD that shows in-home philosophies, early intervention strategies, creativity and resources utilized by tenacious parents intent on ensuring their daughter would achieve literacy skills, despite her dual-sensory impairments. Includes raw discussion of parents' emotional journey from grief and loss upon first learning of her blindness, then later of her severe hearing impairment, then to knowledge thirst, action, advocacy, parent-led IEP strategies, and more.

Follow along and learn what Dad and Mom did at home to teach Braille and continuous learning to their daughter. Once deemed "unteachable" by a kindergarten teacher, you'll see how parent-led advocacy with dedicated service providers, and demands that IEP team members have high expectations, resulted in child's selection as 5th grade advancement speaker and Braille Bee finalist in her first competition.

Educators and families they serve will learn answers to these questions and more:

- ❖ What worked at home to build a solid, early foundation for literacy?
- ❖ What school district-provided resources made a difference to the child?
- ❖ What are best in-home practices for families to help students with Braille literacy attainment during elementary school years?
- ❖ How can I help raise expectations for the children I serve?
